

ABSTRACT

[0029] A device for managing text messages sent by an advertiser to mobile subscribers. According to one embodiment, the device may include an advertiser interface module for receiving from the advertiser content of a text message and at least one criterion. In addition, the device may include a database management module in communication with the advertiser interface module for interrogating a database to determine the mobile subscribers that satisfy the criterion.